

Flexible Resources for Helping the Built Environment Respond to COVID-19

We have been supporting the built environment for almost a decade. We want to reassure our clients that we are here to help alleviate any strategic or operational difficulties that arise from the novel corona virus.

Amidst the disruption to senior staffing caused by the COVID-19 outbreak, business continuity is absolutely critical at this time and we are here to help you plan how you will cover not only key leadership functions in the case of absence and business-as-usual disruption, but also with the additional pressure that the crisis may place on your teams. This means having a known network and shortlist of candidates ready for any eventuality.

We have access to a large pool of professional and operational interims that are ready to step in and assist you from a few weeks to a period of several months.

How we can help

Short-term cover for executive absence

Having the confidence to bring in skilled executives to complement remaining and existing leadership teams will be key to bolster team and staff morale. From a client-facing perspective, they can be utilised to provide clear, level-headed communications at the most senior level to reassure on service provision.

FM Workforce, H&S and business continuity

In light of the increased demand on H&S and cleaning services, planning your workforce to mitigate risk against delivering a contract is absolutely critical. It could be worth investing in short-term, highly experienced specialists with key skills in this scenario to expertly advise on appropriate measures and risk planning for your organisation.

Financial planning & analysis

Maintaining cashflow during periods of tougher service provision will be essential to business longevity and resilience. Having access to a pool of high-calibre interims with excellent financial acumen that can step in and take the reins in a crisis could be essential. In addition we can provide interims who can analyse, plan and roll-out strategies to mitigate financial risk during times of volatility.

Technology to enable remote access working

It will become increasingly critical that businesses have the correct technology to enable their teams to work effectively from wherever they are located. This often requires specialist knowledge of systems, security and tech structures - not always a permanent skillset - and you may require an interim IT or digital expert to assist.
